

Moynihan Challenge Event

Building Community Capacity to Adapt to Climate Change Across Sites, Groups, and Scales

Friday, April 22, 2016 ~ Strasser Legacy Room (220 Eggers Hall)

9:30-12:00 | Public Plenary Session

Diana Liverman, Department of Geography, University of Arizona

Debra Javeline, Department of Political Science, University of Notre Dame

Ed Carr, International Development, Community, and Environment, Clark University

Don Nelson, Department of Anthropology, University of Georgia

12:30-4:30 | Interdisciplinary Discussion Workshop (must RSVP)

Please RSVP by April 15 at <https://goo.gl/KsbDoJ> or to pedavi01@syr.edu if you wish to participate in the afternoon workshop. Lunch will be provided. Space is limited. Please inform us of any dietary restrictions.

This event aims to enhance critical conversations about climate change adaptation across academic disciplines, thereby engaging with different perspectives that can foster integrative analyses and further collaborations.

Farhana Sultana

*Associate Professor,
Department of Geography*

Peter Wilcoxon

Professor, Department of Public Administration and International Affairs

Sarah Pralle

*Associate Professor,
Department of Political Science*

Catherine Gerard

Director, Program for the Advancement of Research on Conflicts and Collaboration (PARCC)